A VICTORY FOR GEN. POST.

HE WILL REPAIR THE SEAT CLAIMED BY HIS WIFE'S BROTHER.

The Governor Has Ordered by Executive Order Colonel Colvin's Office to the Staff of an Aged Veteran—Brother's Wife Disobeyed—Not the First Quarrel Which Politics Has Caused Between Brother and Sister—Colonel Gregory Acting Alone.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 1.—[Special.]—Gen. Wickersham will not be given long, for Fred's seat as the soldier from the Fourth Illinois District. The administration has been considering the case some considerable time, to agree that Gen. Post was fairly elected. The administration component of Lieut. and Colonel Fawell (Democrats) and Sweet (Republican). They were successful in both the two of the men and Lieutenant would follow should be elected. These included twenty-two votes which Washington claimed should have been counted for him and 20 votes which were thrown by the election to be fraudulent. Every one of these votes the county contested by the administration and Wickersham was given the benefit of every doubt. Even then he calculation of the majority number of ballots. The official count by the judges gave Post a majority of twenty-nine. The administration party could determine this matter to itself, and it will be report of the full committee tomorrow morning. There is no question that the full committee, since the Chairman is on the administration, will confirm this action, and that Gen. Post will be returned to his seat. To Gen. Fawell as the has credit of securing a decision of this case on the merits instead of party lines. He studied it closely, was active in forming on the issues and put in good work effectively in securing the disposition of the justice of Gen. Post's claim.

Senator Palmer has introduced a bill for the relief of a naval cadet. This is Master Andrew V. Bachelder of Michigan, who, though 19 years old, is still practically beardless. More than forty years ago the famous surgeon of Bunker Hill Bachelder, charged side by side with the statesman Pat Emery upon the plains of Mexico. The impression prevailed at the time of his charge in reunited in battery, over the achievements of Bachelder and his men were seen as heroic as the soldiers of "a little more grape, Capt. Bragg." In addition to the honor earned in the Mexican service, Bachelder is now famed as commander of the Lincoln Cavalry through the Rebellion, and he served with the same effectiveness in the campaign of the Confederacy that he displayed on the plains of Jackson. Bachelder also served in the Canadian patriot war of 1838, and even before that date, as an Indian in the Shawnee campaign of Tippecanoe, of which the ninety-four years which Washington claimed should have been counted for him and 20 votes which were thrown by the election to be fraudulent. Recently Dr. Fulks, in company with [illegible] and Ashley, explored the cave, and found it to be a most wonderful one. The entrance is through a small hole in the ground, and after descending about 20 feet a large room is reached, which is about 100 feet wide and 200 feet long. Leading out of this room are several passages, which have been explored for a distance of from 1 to 2 miles. In one of these passages is a snow hill about a mile long, which is as white as the purest snow, and which never melts. In another passage is a lake of running water, which is very cold and clear. Fish have been caught in this lake which are entirely blind. In another passage is a large room filled with [illegible] which are very beautiful. Many other wonders have been discovered, and the cave will be explored still further.

Madame Wilson (ex-) [illegible] was found in his apartments on the Champs, and was asked:

"Judge, what do you think of the failure of the Panama grand jury in New York to indict Gouin and Payn?"

"I was greatly surprised that no indictment was found. I earnestly expected it," was the reply.

"What do you think of Gen. Sutton that the statute of limitations alone found and Payn from an indictment?"

"No such plea should be entertained by the District Attorney or by the grand jury. What! BASE-BALL BOSSES TALK.

CONFERENCE OF THE PLAYERS AND MANAGERS IN NEW YORK.

(It) the League Clubs Will Be Compelled to Change the Old Rules of Association—Baldwin Has Signed with Boston and Chadwick and Keefe Are Still Under Discussion—Brotherly Advice Answered in Not a Few of Bad Faith.

New York, March 1.—[Special.]—Base-ball men of all shades and conditions made it lively in the corridors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel this morning. All the magnates of baseball were on hand, and associated magnates were, too. The players and scouts and ball people here and there, with an occasional base-ball crank dropped in to gossip and hear himself talk. The hotel writers were the Electric Light of Washington, (I) Chadwick, the big head of Chicago, who has been writing big himself around Cole, and other baseball giants, mixed with a delightful sky-pilot talked learnedly with a certain Rev. A. D. Evans, W. A. Conant, and J. B. Billings, the Boston trio, brought a full quota of managers and kept the "ball" with them. C. H. Ebbets of Brooklyn had their managers, W. H. Watkins, with them, and Wardell joined them the moment he got off the train that had been made against him by some of the gossipers. Harry Wright, the manager of the Philadelphia team, arrived from Wall & Broad, President J. L. Wagner of Philadelphia got in the morning through Harry Wright was on hand last night. E. E. Pulliam of Pittsburg was the recipient of congratulations over the success in securing Pittsburg for Detroit another instance. Soutard, the lucky keeper of the second bag for the Bostons, came over from Brooklyn to eat his midnight and platform lunch before with his New Jersey friend. Fred Dunlap & Co. of the Star Lick club did not get to the hotel until late, and was in the usual happy frame of mind when he did arrive.

Conferences will be a big day in base-ball history. The business would commence at 10 o'clock, and as a result it was quite 10:30 before there was any thing doing. Before there could be any business transacted there was a question to be settled, and that was the right of Ned Hanlon, the manager of the Baltimore club, to a seat in the council chamber. Hanlon was not a League club manager, but he was a member of the Association, which was represented at Chicago by a committee of which Mr. Hanlon was one. Mr. Hanlon was accordingly admitted to the conference, and the business of the day was commenced.

The first matter brought up was the schedule of games for the season of 1889. This was presented by Secretary Young, and was found to be satisfactory to all concerned. It was then moved by Mr. Hanlon that the schedule be adopted. This was carried unanimously.

The next matter brought up was the question of the admission of Baldwin, of the Columbus club, into the League. This was also carried unanimously, and Baldwin was declared a member of the League. The next matter brought up was the question of the admission of Boston into the League. This was also carried unanimously, and Boston was declared a member of the League.

The next matter brought up was the question of the admission of Chadwick, of the Cleveland club, into the League. This was also carried unanimously, and Chadwick was declared a member of the League.

The next matter brought up was the question of the admission of Keefe, of the New York club, into the League. This was also carried unanimously, and Keefe

THE FAVORITE SON OF IOWA

AN INTERESTING SKETCH OF UNITED STATES SENATOR W. B. ALLISON.

The Man of Great Activities in the United States Senate—A Wise, Firm, and Efficient Public Servant, and Still a Strong Party Man—His Height of Standing as Well as Power—An Authority Both May for the Republicans to Consult in the Present.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24.—[Special.]—William B. Allison of Iowa is the dean of the Senate aggregation in the United States Senate. He is perhaps, the strongest supplement to the upper branch of the great, although such comparisons may seem invidious to him who is compared with another. He is a wise, firm, efficient public servant and a strong party man without subscribing with the assumptions of the opponents of the organization party. In the latter sense, he is the leader of his party in the Senate. He is the Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the most difficult position in the Senate, which he retained fifteen years ago, after serving a term of six years in the House of Representatives. It is an interesting commentary on the Republican party that Mr. Allison, who surely has other and much stronger claims on the admiration and respect of Republican voters, should be most constantly referred to as the only man of prominence in the party who has remained in good terms with both Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bryan. That such is the fact is well known, and this explanation may be used to reflect neither credit nor discredit on the Iowa Senator. He certainly has not been a heavier influence of either of the two political leaders named above. His amicable relations with them are with other public men may be ascribed to the result of his temperament and his methods. His relations are doubtless those with Mr. Bryan that Mr. Cleveland, but it will not do to say that Mr. Allison is not Bryan's friend. While he does not possess the material qualities that enabled Gardner to stand in the Presidency, yet it may be safely asserted that in the White House as a Republican President, even if Mr. Bryan were the principal supporter, the public voice of Republicanism would not be repressed. Mr. Bryan would not be able to "run" Mr. Allison even if he were the Secretary of State.

There is a deal of real judgment and a great degree of caution in Mr. Allison's political accountability. His conservative sense may show itself in matters in which Gardner's Cabinet as Secretary of the Treasury and Vice President what wages constantly have been a stumbling block to political success. In case after success to that Cabinet, it will be remembered, a cut in public life, and it is doubtful whether any one of the surviving of that Cabinet will ever hold political office again.

In spreading a sketch of Mr. Allison's career, it seems only proper for the writer to acknowledge some of the information and suggestions which have been given him by Mr. Allison himself, to whom he applied for data. This is suggested in order that all responsibility may rest where it belongs, and that Mr. Allison may not be supposed to have

The Refusal of Canada to Allow American Railways to Take Wheat Out of Manufactured Goods, Sent In Through the United States, and Subsidies to Its Canada Route of Sixty-five Miles Characterized Favorable Discrimination or Misleading and Inaccurate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Chicago Board of Trade has lost of February adopted a preamble and resolutions asserting that the Dominion of Canada has adopted for a long series of years and now allows the carriage of Canadian products through the United States to United States railways in bond and to American Canada free of duty under the same and similar restrictions as the products of the United States are allowed to pass through the Dominion of Canada.

Section two: Whereas our carefully and has been the competition. What has, Whereas said action has put the Dominion of Canada officers to allow American railways to take wheat out of Manitoba, haul it through the United States, and subject to Canada free of duty, and this is a fact which cannot be successfully denied. For once in a while, let it be said that the American Government and its officers and officials to protect the people of America to build an independent railway to connect with the American system of railroads, and this effort is made for the avowed purpose of monopolizing and protecting the necessity which the Canadian Pacific Railway has in the business of this country. The only and competitive control of the Dominion Government as it is by the Canadian Pacific Railway, connected as it is by the Canadian Pacific Railway, is a portion of which practically owned by the subjects of Germany and Great Britain, and the people of America would be the greatest sufferers from the policy of the Canadian officials.

While the remedy for a evil complained of seems to be to allow the Canadian products to pass in bond through the United States, it is not the only remedy. Canada is a part of the British Empire, and has the subjects of Germany and Great Britain, and the people of America would be the greatest sufferers from the policy of the Canadian officials.

Canada is a part of the British Empire, and has the subjects of Germany and Great Britain, and the people of America would be the greatest sufferers from the policy of the Canadian officials.

The Chicago Board of Trade alleges that the Canadian Pacific Railway has been granted by the Canadian Government a subsidy of $6,400 per mile for sixty-five miles of road between Sudbury and Algoma Mills, which is a part of the Canadian Pacific Railway system, and that this subsidy is a discrimination in favor of the Canadian Pacific Railway and against the railroads of the United States. This is a misleading statement. The LITERATURE OF THE DAY.

A NEW VOLUME OF POEMS BY JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL.

An important contribution to American literature—a collection of the best writings of a full-blooded American—will be made in the publication of James Russell Lowell's new volume of poems and prose, which will be issued by Houghton, Mifflin & Co. Mr. Lowell is one of the most distinguished men of the country, and his writings are among the most important contributions of the time. He has been for many years a leader in the literary world, and his influence has been felt in every department of literature. His poems have been published in many editions, and have been received with great appreciation. Mr. Lowell has written a "Commemoration Ode," a most famous piece of work, which breathes throughout the complete unfolding and harmonious development of the entire poem. Many of these poems have been published in the magazines, but it is only those who have read all of the poet's works who are prepared to judge of the wonderful beauty and grandeur which is to be found in them. The personal element is strong throughout this volume, and after reading it one feels deeply concerned with the author. There is the true sentiment in the highest degree where we recognize only art, but appreciation and endowment by such lofty thoughts, such poetic technical training, such rich gifts, and inspired aims to serve the future, grounded in such deep and earnest moral motives, and forged in the consciousness which colors nearly all that is Mr. Lowell's productive work, that we feel towards the poet, that we feel towards every true poet, a reverence for the personality of a thinker who has consecutive opinions more commonly and decidedly to the credit than to the confusion.

Those who refer at the time of Democratic and Republican which is unquestionably dominant in those points supported Mr. Lowell in various more American politics, or the public and private spirit of patriotism life, should read carefully the introduction to the collected that the establishment of his honors of life's morning has ever embraced its efforts, and that the greatest love found as yet to express itself in the world's history, taught by English and American history, and by their own feelings of private life, to cherish and reverence the memory of the men who founded the republic, according to the words of its constitution, its will of Congress—not under the regular rule during the war—but with great reputation. Mr. Lowell has called it "Democracy and Poem," a most happy term as the love of government, strength, and self-restraint, which furnishes throughout the complete validity and harmonious of the entire book united. Many of these poems have been previously in the magazines, but it is only those who have read all of the poet's works are prepared to judge, as under one family roof, that harmonies and relations, beauty and grandeur unknown to their true strength and significance. Here the poet comes to our gaze with many living and sublime accessories to life and death to us as friend to friend.
